DEHYDRATED PRODUCTS

What is dehydration

Food drying is a method of food preservation in which food is dried (dehydrated or desiccated). Drying inhibits the growth of bacteria, yeasts, and mold through the removal of water. Dehydration has been used widely for this purpose since ancient times; the earliest known practice is 12,000 B.C. by inhabitants of the modern Middle East and Asia regions.^[2] Water is traditionally removed through evaporation (air drying, sun drying, smoking or wind drying), although today electric food dehydrators or freeze-drying can be used to speed the drying process and ensure more consistent results.

DEHYDRATED ONION TYPES

Tip

Minced or chopped dried varieties are sometimes referred to as instant garlic or onion. To use these you can rehydrate them with hot water for 15 minutes, discard the water, and use them like you would fresh in stews, soups, and sauces.

DEHYDRATED GARLIC TYPES

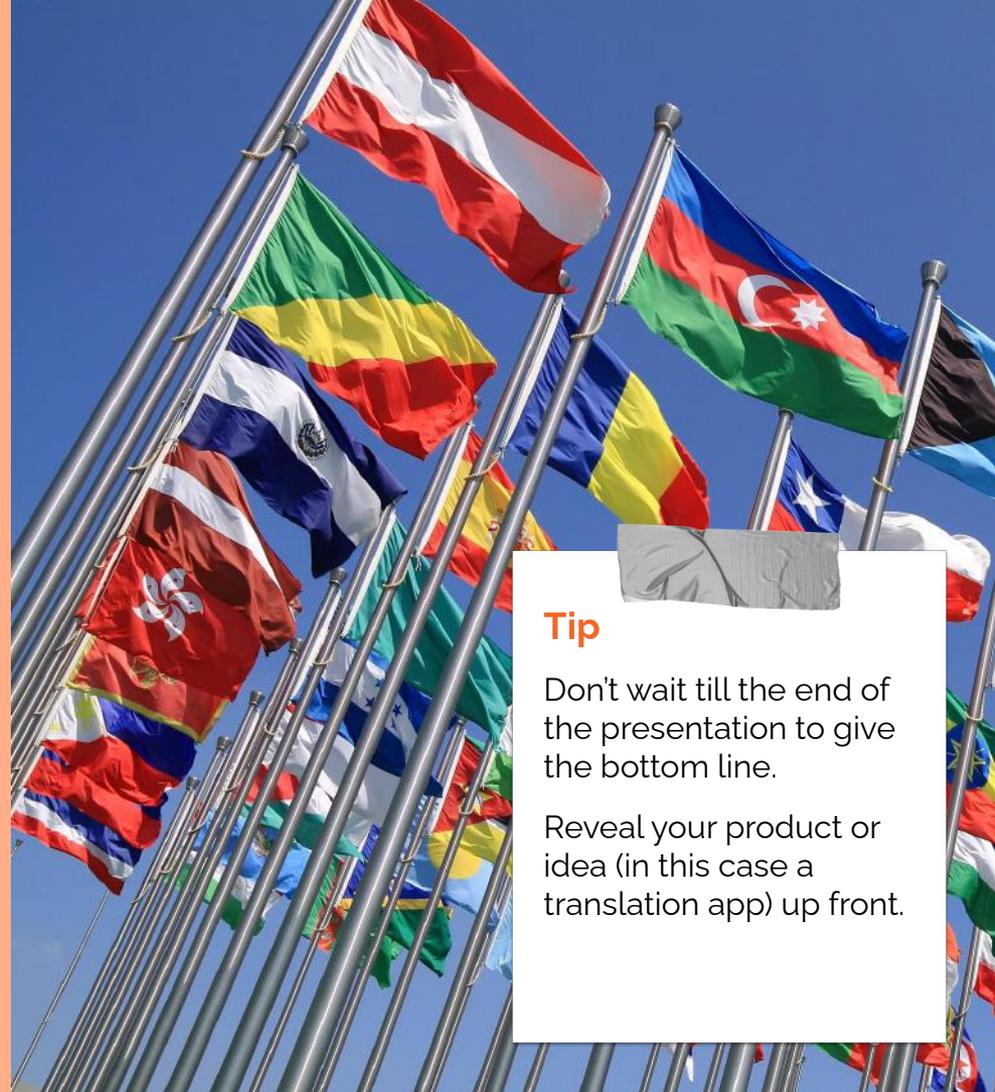

Tip

Dehydrated Garlic is great for the healthy heart. Besides equalizing the blood circulation, this helps in lowering the blood pressure, triglycerides, and cholesterol as well as may neutralize the side effect of the smoking for blood pressure.
